Helping Move People To Self-Sufficiency

Who should help—If not YOU? Then Who?

- Do you want to help impoverished children and adults have a chance to be more productive citizens?
- Do you believe it is time to help those who wish to become more self-sufficient?
- Do you want to be in a team or supporting a team of volunteer professionals who are helping inner-city nonprofits help citizens achieve these self-sufficiency goals?

If the answer is yes, we need volunteers like you... those with professional expertise and those with support role expertise to give our nonprofits the advantage to win the self-sufficiency & poverty battles.

Background

Making A Difference Inc. (MADI), a 501C3, was formed in 2000 in response to the projected impact of the 1996 Welfare Reform Act. More people needed more help to become self-sufficient or poverty rates could increase.

For our front line nonprofits to achieve higher levels of impact, the MADI visionaries saw a need for unprecedented collaboration among the nonprofits, religious community, government, business, and other community assets.

Just like our best institutions, our inner-city nonprofits need more professional expertise to reach their full potential and to fully impact barriers to self-sufficiency. MADI will provide that expertise.

Facts

- Most nonprofits cannot afford the full array of required expertise.
- A team approach to organizational management yields far greater performance than traditional methods.
- Strategic approaches with experienced coaches provide the edge to effective implementations & outcomes.

All assets focused on strategic goals

What is our experience?

We were awarded government based contracts to conduct faith based mentoring of children. We have also conducted free strategic best practice organizational assessments for inner-city nonprofits.

What have we learned from our experience?

- Our individual volunteer consultants made a difference in organizational effectiveness.
- For our nonprofits to truly impact self-sufficiency in a timely fashion, a strategic, best practices coaching/consulting team approach is required.

As a team, we can make a difference
